Admiral Stansfield Turner
Director of Central Intelligence
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D. C. 20505

Dear Admiral Turner:

In February of this year, the U. S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in a case arising under the Freedom of Information Act, Weissman v. CIA, stated in dicta that the CIA did not have legal authority to conduct investigations of persons within the United States without their consent or knowledge on the grounds that such persons may be considered for employment by the Agency at some later date. Indeed, the Agency appeared to have compiled some 50 documents in the course of investigating the plaintiff in the Weissman case from 1958 to 1963.

I write now to ask what the Agency's current policy is with respect to the conduct of such investigations. I have posed a number of questions in this regard which I have enclosed as an attachment to this letter. I would very much appreciate your prompt response to them.

Sincerely,

Richardson Preyer
Chairman

QUESTIONS

1. Does the CIA currently conduct investigations of unaffiliated U.S. citizens without their consent or knowledge on the grounds that they may be considered for employment, or as an intelligence source, at some future date? If so,
 - a. Describe the circumstances which would justify such investigations.
 - b. Provide the number of persons who are annually subject to such investigations.
 - c. Provide a copy of the Agency regulation(s) which authorize or govern this practice.
2. Please set forth the Agency's position with respect to the legality of such practices after the Weissman decision.
3. If there are current Agency regulations which prohibit such practices, please furnish a copy to the subcommittee.
4. If such investigations are no longer undertaken, at what point did the Agency end such practice? For what period of time were such investigations conducted by the Agency?
5. Please indicate, or provide an estimate of the total number of persons who were subjects of such investigations in the past; and, a further breakdown, if available, of the number of investigations conducted a) where no future employment of, or b) no future use as an intelligence source or contact with the individual, was forthcoming.
6. If the Agency believes the collection of such information is illegal, what has been the disposition of records of earlier such investigations now considered improper?
